1 The story of Hero and Leander, a likely source of the tradition of the dialogo di partenza, here depicted on a majolica plate by Francesco Xanto Avelli (fl.1525–45) (Modena, Galleria e Museo Estense)

James Chater

'Such sweet sorrow': the dialogo di partenza in the Italian madrigal

TT is dawn. In a secluded rural spot, perhaps the L banks of a river, two lovers, a shepherd and a shepherdess, are about to part. 'Farewell', says he; 'Farewell', she replies, 'since it is the will of heaven.' After weeping, sighing and kissing, they go their separate ways, their united heart cleft in twain. This is the timeless and universal topos of the alba, or lovers' parting at dawn, as it is manifested in a distinct repertory of madrigals published between 1570 and the early 17th century. My aim here is to outline the main characteristics of this subgenre, and of Marenzio's contribution to it. How did the dialogo di partenza develop and spread? What were the reasons for its vogue? What were its literary antecedents? And what was its role in the development of secular music?

A good place to start our investigation is I lieti amanti, one of the madrigal collections published under the auspices of Ferrarese academies. On 8 August 1586 the Ferrarese courtier Ippolito Gianluca dedicated this collection to the Veronese academician Mario Bevilacqua. As Marco Giuliani points out in his edition of I lieti amanti,1 the collection's contents must have been prepared well in advance of publication, as one of the contributors, Andrea Gabrieli, died in August 1585.2 It is the first of two collections with a substantial Ferrarese input to be dedicated to Bevilacqua, the second being La gloria musicale of 1592. It is also the second or third Ferrarese anthology with which Gianluca is thought to have been involved, and the third of what we might call the Ferrarese 'theme' collections, in which each anthology is characterized by a literary motive or emblem (see table 1).3

Table 1 The Ferrarese madrigal anthologies, 1582-92

RISM	Title & publication details	Dedication	Theme & comments
1582 <sup>5</sup>	Il lauro secco Ferrara: Vittorio Baldini	'A' virtuosi lettori' by 'I Rinovati'; announces Il lauro verde as sequel; ?collab. Tasso & Gianluca	withered, dessicated laurel tree as symbol of faded love
1583 <sup>10</sup>	Il lauro verde Ferrara: Vittorio Baldini	None, but in honour of Laura Peperara, who married Count Annibale Turco, Feb 1583; collab. Tasso & Gianluca	flourishing laurel symbolizing a new love
1586 <sup>10</sup>	I lieti amanti Venice: Giacomo Vincenzi & Ricciardo Amadino	to Count Mario Bevilacqua, by 'Hippolito Zanluca' [Gianluca], Ferrara, 8 Aug 1586	dual: partenza and sdegno; origins in Gianluca's private ridotto?
1591 <sup>9</sup>	Giardino de musici ferraresi Venice: Giacomo Vincenzi	to Alfonso II, Duke of Ferrara, by Giacomo Vincenzi, Venice, 1 Apr 1591	no particular theme
1592 <sup>14</sup>	La gloria musicale Venice, Ricciardo Amadino	to Count Mario Bevilacqua, by Filippo Nicoletti, Ferrara, 'ultimo dì Febrajo 1592'	no particular theme; product of private ridotto of Bonifazio and Luigi Bevilacqua

James Chater, who is active as a freelance editor, translator and writer, is the author of a book on Marenzio and of several articles on music, poetry and patronage in late-Renaissance Italy.

Count Ippolito Gianluca was assigned by Alfonso II d'Este, Duke of Ferrara, to accompany Torquato Tasso on the brief occasions when the poet was allowed out of the Ospedale di Sant'Anna during his confinement there from 1579 to 1586 on grounds of mental instability. He collaborated with Tasso in selecting and organizing the poetry for Il lauro verde and Il lauro secco. Moreover, Gianluca seems to have been a keen amateur musician, as the dedication of I lieti amanti makes clear:

... avendo inteso come ella tra gli altri degni studi prenda diletto di musica, ho voluto mandare in luce sotto il suo nome i presenti madrigali di varii et eccellenti compositori. La quale dedicazione fanno meco insieme tutti quei gentiluomini che ordinariamente si riducono in casa mia per così fatto trattenimento.

... having heard how you delight in music among other worthy pursuits, I wanted to publish under your name the present madrigals of various and excellent composers. I am joined in this dedication by all those gentlemen who regularly gather in my house for such a pastime.

If the two Lauro anthologies were prepared under the auspices of the Accademia dei Rinnovati (the concept of a revived laurel is probably intended as a pun on the name of the academy), the contents of I lieti amanti and La gloria musicale may have originated in more private spheres, respectively the ridotti of Gianluca and the Bevilacqua brothers.

Of the three 'theme' anthologies listed above, I lieti amanti was unique at the time of its publication for its double-variation structure: there are 20 pieces, all for five voices except the last two, contributed by composers who fall into two groups. The first group, consisting mostly of composers living in the state of Ferrara, are the authors of the dialoghi di partenza, the subject of this article. The second group, made up of composers from the rest of Italy, set texts in which an ex-lover heaps scorn on his lady for imagining that he is still in love with her (see table 2).

The title of the collection gains its piquancy from the interrelationship between the pair of themes in alternation. It is a jeu d'esprit signifying two diametrically opposed forms of happiness—in love

Table 2 The contents of I lieti amanti

		Composer
No.	Text (Poet)	Ferrarese	Non-Ferrarese
[1]	Tirsi dolente e mesto / quando parte l'aurora	Ippolito Fiorini
[2]	Non visse la mia vita, / donna, del vostr'amore		Alessandro Striggio
[3]	'Cara mia Dafne a dio', / dissi partendo all'apparir del sole	Orazio Vecchi	00
[4]	Tanto, donna, stim'io / i tuoi lampi di sdegno		Rinaldo del Mel
[5]	'A dio, bella Siringa, / bella Siring'a dio', 'Clorinda a dio'	Innocenzo Alberti
[6]	Fallace ardir e troppo stolte voglie, / donna, fur la cagione		Andrea Rota
[7]	Due pallidetti amant / vid'io press'una fonte	Alessandro Milleville
[8]	Falsa credenza avete, / donna, se voi credete		Luca Marenzio
[9]	Press'una verde riva / io queste voci udia	Marcello Tosone
[10]	Se m'amasti, io t'amai, / e s'or da me tu fuggi, io da te fuggo		Alfonso Ganassi
	(Maurizio Mauro)
[11]	'Dolce e vaga mia Clori, / a dio', 'Silvano, a dio'	Lodovico Agostini
[12]	Donna, ben v'ingannate / che di vita i' sia priva	Ü	Costanzo Porta
[13]	'A dio, mio dolce Aminta', / 'Bella mia Silvia, a dio'	Alberto L'Occa
[14]	Se da' tuoi lacci sciolto / tu pur credi ch'io pera		Ruggiero Giovannelli
[15]	'A dio', Titiro disse; 'A dio' rispose / la bella Citarea	Paolo Virchi
[16]	Io non son però morto, / donna, come pensate		Giaches de Wert
[17]	'Dolce Amaranta, a dio', 'Corinto, a dio', / dicea partendo allora	Paolo Isnardi
[18]	Voi sete in grand'errore, / donna, a pensar che senz'il vostr'amore		Andrea Gabrieli
	Filli al partir del suo caro pastore / dicea: 'Ohimè da me partita'	Luzzasco Luzzaschi [a6]
	Sdegno la fiamma estinse / e rintuzzò lo strale e sciolto il nodo (Orsina Cavaletta)	[]	Lelio Bertani [a6]

Ex.1 Ippolito Fiorino, Tirsi dolente e mesto, bars 1-4 (after I lieti amanti: madrigali di venti musicisti ferraresi e non, ed. M. Giuliani (Florence, 1990), pp.45-8, at p.45) and out of love. The odd-numbered texts (set by the Ferrarese group) portray mutually requited lovers who are grieving at their impending departure. By contrast, the even-numbered texts (set by the non-Ferrarese group) describe the happiness of ex-lovers liberated from their unrequited love and who take pleasure in pouring scorn on the erstwhile beloved. Both thematic strands were already familiar topics in Italian poetry and music.<sup>7</sup> In particular, the theme of scorn is already found in Il lauro secco (1582), where a love that has withered is compared to a dry laurel tree, and in the collection Sdegnosi ardori (Munich: Adam Berg, RISM 1585<sup>17</sup>), in which Guarini's Ardo sì, ma non t'amo is set by 28 composers.<sup>8</sup>

The happiness depicted in I lieti amanti is problematical to say the least. This is clear right from the first line of the opening piece, Ippolito Fiorino's Tirsi, dolente e mesto ('Thyrsis, lamenting and weeping'), underlined by a striking minor-for-major substitution (see ex.1). The odd-numbered texts are full of such sentimental, languorous moments, while the even-numbered texts are robustly scornful. Another contrast between the two groups is that between country and town, between pastoral and courtly settings. The pastoral space is occupied by the Ferrarese group (with anacreontic names; literal descriptions of nature and of the outward signs of human emotion), while the courtly poems are set by the non-Ferrarese group (the lady is coldly addressed as 'Donna'; physical description gives way to a more abstract discourse; stereotypical emblems of love replace literal description). Thus the opposed locations of the two poetic groups are neatly provided with a counterpart in the real world: Ferrarese versus non-Ferrarese. The two groups of poems qualify, call into question and act as antidote to each other. We are invited to ask: what is happiness? can there be pleasure without pain (or vice versa)? and was the Golden Age really golden? At least the Ferrarese group, in their occupation of the pastoral space, seem to be closer to the Golden Age than the non-Ferrarese.

The dialoghi di partenza in I lieti amanti and other sources are all in varying degrees loosely constructed around a predetermined formula:9 (1) a dialogue of farewell, usually in the first two lines; (2) a line referring to the scene, e.g. the dawn, the location of a river bank; (3) a description of the physical symptoms of the lovers' distraught state; (4) a concluding sentenza describing the lovers' separation, sometimes in paradoxical terms-no.1, 'E via sen porta l'un all'altro il core' ('And carried away each others' hearts'); no.19, 'Ma da me stesso io parto e dal cor mio' ('But I depart from myself and from my heart'). The scheme is normative rather than prescriptive, as is shown by two examples in I lieti amanti, the text set by Alberto L'Occa (no.13; given below) and the one set by Vecchi (no.3):

'Cara mia Dafne, a dio', dissi partendo all'apparir del sole. 'A dio, Tirsi mio caro', ella rispose, e'l bel color di rose d'un pallor di viole sparse per la pietà del pallor mio. Ella piangeva ed io, io sospirava ed ella, dolente sì com'era vaga e bella.

'Dear Daphne, adieu', I said, as I departed when the sun rose. 'Adieu, my dear Thyrsis', she replied, and her lovely rose complexion was flecked with a pallor of violets out of pity for my pallor. She and I both wept; she and I both sighed—[she was] no less grieving than charming and beautiful.

The dawn is present in no.3 but not in no.13, while no.13 concludes with the theme of the divided hearts, and no.3 with the observation that the nymph is as sad as she is beautiful. However, these differences are outweighed by a remarkable uniformity of content, suggesting a high degree of editorial control. The poetry would appear to have been selected or written to very exact specifications. Most if not all of it must have been written specially for the collection, as none of the partenze has yet been located in literary sources or their authors identified.

Tasso's friendship with Gianluca and his interest in the philosophy of love mean he is the likeliest candidate as the poet and/or compiler of the partenze in I lieti amanti. It is easy to imagine how he may have been stimulated by the kinds of conversations about love that he recreates in his dialogues. For example, La Molza, overo De l'amore recalls a conversation at the Villa Medelana in 1583 with Ippolito Gianluca, Marfisa d'Este, Tarquinia Molza and Ginevra Marzi in which Tasso was asked to proffer a new definition of love. 10 While there is no overlap between this dialogue and I lieti amanti, Tasso's own contribution to the partenza genre needs to be considered. This is a ballata, Non si levava ancor l'alba novella, written probably between 1586 and 1587.11 The poem includes most of the motives common to the genre: dawn, sighing, kissing, exchange of greetings ('Addio'), pallor as a sign of grief, and departure as equivalent to death. A more specific verbal echo unites Tasso's poem with no.3 of Il lieti amanti, Cara mia Dafne, a dio (given above), in which the lovers' rose complexion is described as turning to pallor. An even more suggestive echo occurs between Tasso's poem (ll.8–14):

... e i dolci pianti
ne l'accoglienze estreme mescolavan co' baci e co' sospiri.
Mille ardenti pensier, mille desiri, mille voglie non paghe
in quelle luci vaghe scopría quest'alma innamorata e quella.

... and their sweet tears at their final farewells they mingled with kisses and with sighs. A thousand ardent thoughts, a thousand desires, a thousand unsatisfied wishes were manifest in those lovely eyes of this and that enamoured soul.

and the text set by Paolo Virchi in I lieti amanti (no.15):

Le parole, i sospiri, le lacrime, i singulti e i cari baci, mille vaghi pensier, mille desiri, mille amorosi baci fur l'accoglienze estreme.

The words, the sighs, the tears, the sobs and the sweet kisses, a thousand lovely thoughts, a thousand desires, a thousand amorous kisses were their final farewells.

The precise relationship between Tasso's poem and those of I lieti amanti is hard to establish. Tasso's treatment is more expansive and pictorial, and his poem has a richer and more distinguished pedigree; indeed, Stefano La Via has traced affinities between Non si levava, Monteverdi's setting of it, Rore's Da le belle contrade and Titian's painting Venere e Adone.12 However, if Tasso's ballata pre-dates the poems of I lieti amanti, one would expect it to have been published earlier; and, as we shall see, a poem exists from 1570 that is much closer to the I lieti amanti poems and would have been more likely to serve as a model. Whatever the exact chronology and flow of influences, the similarities between Non si levava and the dialogues in I lieti amanti suggest Tasso had a hand in preparing the texts of at least some of them.

Several of the motives found in the dialogues of I lieti amanti are in fact present in earlier poems. Our search for a prototype would naturally lead us to consider those settings of the poems in I lieti amanti that were published in the years immediately preceding the collection itself: Marco Giuliani identifies three such settings, two correctly and one incorrectly.<sup>13</sup> The two correctly identified settings are both of Cara mia Dafne, a dio given above; before the appearance of Vecchi's setting in I lieti amanti it had been set by Alessandro Milleville (1584) and Lelio Bertani (1585), both of whom also contributed to I lieti amanti. However, an even stronger candidate as our prototype is a poem not included in I lieti amanti but set by Marenzio in his Secondo libro de madrigali a6 (1584),<sup>14</sup> where the resemblance to no.13 of I lieti amanti (Alberto L'Occa) is especially strong:

Marenzio

'Filli mia bella, a dio',
'Caro mio Tirsi, a dio, poi che 'l ciel vuole', dicea sovr'Arno all'apparir del sole pastor afflitto, afflitta pastorella;
piangev'ei, piangeva ella,
piangeva insieme Amore,
e quinci e quindi si divise il core.

'My lovely Phyllis, adieu',
'My dear Thyrsis, adieu, since heaven wills it', said on the Arno as the sun rose
a grief-struck shepherd, a grief-struck shepherdess;
he wept, she wept,
Amor wept with them,
and then and there they divided each other's heart.

L'Occa

'A dio, mio dolce Aminta',

'Bella mia Silvia, a dio', disse sovra un bel rio
pastor afflitto, afflitta pastorella,
ei sospirando ed ella.
E'l dividersi solo
era cagion del duolo, ché partendo ambo ne' più freschi albori, si diviser da lor gli accesi cori.

'Adieu, my sweet Amyntas',
'My lovely Sylvia, adieu', said on the bank of a river
a grief-struck shepherd, a grief-struck shepherdess,
he and she both sighing.
And their separation was the sole cause of their grief, because as they both departed towards the verdant trees, their ardent hearts were divided from each other.

New Publications Autumn 1999

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

Piano concerto No. 5 E flat major op. 73

Edition for two pianos HN 637 DM 36.-

FRÉDÉRIC CHOPIN

Nocturne c minor op. 48 No. 1

HN 663 DM 6.-

Polonaise A major op. 40 No. 1 ("Militaire") HN 661 DM 6.-

IIV OUT DIVI O.

H

G. HENLE PUBLISHERS
MUNICH www.henle.de

FRÉDÉRIC CHOPIN

Waltz D flat major op. 64 No. 1 ("Minutes") HN 662 DM 6.-

ANTONÍN DVOŘÁK

Waldesruhe op. 68 No. 5 ("Silence") for violoncelto and piano

HN 621 DM 13.-GEORG FRIEDRICH

HÄNDEL

Flute sonatas vol. II (*Hallenser Sonatas", attributed to Händel) HN 638 DM £4.—

WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART

Divertimento (String trio) E flat major KV 563 and Fragment G major KV App. 66 (562e)

for violin, viola, and violoncello (parts) HN 625 DM 29.--

MAX REGER

Suite for organ e minor op. 16 First edition of the composed's own transcription for piano four-hands

HN 652 DM 34.-

Filli mia bella, a dio is as typical of the formula established in I lieti amanti; so too is A dio, mio dolce Aminta. However, the reference to the river Arno in the Marenzio is, for obvious reasons, nowhere to be found in the poems of the Ferrarese anthology, where unspecific words such as 'rio', 'riva' and 'linfa' are preferred. Marenzio's setting is for six voices; this and the fact that he was a non-Ferrarese would disqualify it from inclusion in I lieti amanti, where, instead, Marenzio contributed a piece in the sdegno category, Falsa credenza havete. Nevertheless, the poetic text of Filli mia bella, a dio could well have provided a model for the dialoghi dell'addio in I lieti amanti. Marenzio resided in Rome as an employee of Cardinal Luigi d'Este, the brother of Duke Alfonso II of Ferrara, and had close connections with the ducal court. He had contributed to-and indeed had been assigned a prominent place inboth the Lauro anthologies (1582-3) following his visit to Ferrara in 1580–81.<sup>15</sup> He appears to have struck up a friendship with Milleville and was, moreover, acquainted with most of the composers who wrote dialoghi di partenza before the publication of I lieti amanti: Eremita and Vecchi (certainly) and (probably) fellow-Brescians Bertani and Virchi (both of whom were closely connected to the Ferrarese court), and probably with other composers in Ferrara.<sup>16</sup>

Filli mia bella, a dio has the longest history of all the dialoghi di partenza discussed here.<sup>17</sup> It was first set to music (with different names in the first two lines) in 1570 and 1571 by two Tuscan composers, Maddalena Casulana<sup>18</sup> and Mauro de' Servi, and again by the Bolognese Camillo Cortellini in 1583, in each case as the seconda parte of a composition which begins with a dialogo d'accoglienza, where the lovers' meeting at sunset on the evening before is described in a stanza which carries obvious verbal

<sup>2</sup> Marenzio, Occhi lucenti e belli, from the canto partbook of Il terzo libro de madrigali a cinque voci (Venice, 1582) (Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale, T.14)

pre-echoes of the partenza.19 The poem, shorn of its prima parte, was attributed to 'Cap[itano] Alessandro Spinola' in a poetic anthology published in Genoa in 1579 (here the first line reads 'A dio, Filli mia bella').20 The Spinola were an old-established Genoese family of merchants, bankers and soldiers, and the Alessandro Spinola in question is a little tricky to identify, as there were many with that name. The figure generally known as 'Capitano' was a soldier who served under Emperor Charles V and distinguished himself in the Tunisian campaign of 1535.21 However, the poems published by Cristoforo Zabata<sup>22</sup> seem to be too modern for the early 16th century, leaving one to suspect that he may have been confused with a younger family member of the same name. This younger member is probably the Alessandro Spinola who was married to Livia Spinola, herself a poet. This Alessandro was one of many members of the Spinola family who were in correspondence with Tasso during his confinement, and to whom the poet wrote many letters begging them to use their influence to have him released.<sup>23</sup> Also Angelo Grillo, the Genoese poet and abbot (who also styled himself Livio Celiano), and Tasso's close friend at this time, was related to the Spinola family.<sup>24</sup> Whichever Alessandro Spinola wrote A dio, Filli mia bella, the Tasso–Grillo–Spinola connection may well have stimulated Tasso's interest in the dialogo di partenza. This Genoese dimension might also help to explain an apparent anomaly of I lieti amanti, the presence of a Genoese composer, Marcello Tosone, among the Ferrarese group.<sup>25</sup>

We can now place the dialogo di partenza in a wider context. The alba tradition to which it is related is characteristic of numerous medieval Provençal and Old High German poems, where the lovers' relationship is usually adulterous. <sup>26</sup> However, there is no direct link between Cinquecento poetry

3 Marenzio, Solo e pensoso, from the basso partbook of Il nono libro de madrigali a cinque voci (Venice, 1599) (Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale, T.29)

4 The title-page of the canto volume of Orlande de Lassus Il primo libro de madrigali a cinque voci (Venice, 1573 reprint), bearing Marenzio's signature (Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale, s.309)

and the troubadours, and in the dialogo di partenza the element of adultery is absent, or at least is never stated explicitly. While the medieval alba is most unlikely to have been a source for the dialogo di partenza, a passage from Ovid's Heroides xviii, which itself has been cited as one of the sources for the medieval alba, was well enough known in 16th-century Italy to have influenced the partenza in general.27 This is Hero's letter to his beloved Leander, where he recalls his crossing of the Hellespont, the rapturous meeting, their night together and their tearful parting at dawn. Indeed, the paradox of the united mind divided by physical separation, a commonplace of the partenza, may have derived ultimately from Ovid.28 It is also significant that Tasso's Non si levava quotes the same line from Petrarch as the well-known translation of the Heroides by Remigio Nannini.29

We may briefly summarize the emergence of the dialoghi di partenza in Cinquecento poetry and music (see table 3). The alba theme creeps into Quattrocento and Cinquecento poetry via Boccaccio and Luigi Groto,30 while the partenza (not necessarily associated with dawn) was a common theme in Cinquecento poetry and music: Rore's Ancor che co'l partire (RISM 154714) is an almost emblematic example. The earliest partenze with direct speech known to me are Rore's alba, Da le belle contrade d'oriente (in his posthumous fifth book of 1566) and Wert's seven-voice dialogue Come viver potrò, dicea Damone in his third book (1563); in the latter, the female and male speakers are represented by the upper three and lower four voices respectively. Alessandro Spinola's A dio, Filli mia bella is the earliest partenza to relate directly to I lieti amanti. Settings of this and related poems first occur among Tuscans (Casulana, Mauro de Servi), then spread to Bolognese (Cortellini, ?Piffari)31 and Ferrarese musical circles. (I include Marenzio in this last category.) By about 1584-5, after the Spinola poem and/or its derivatives came to Tasso's and Gianluca's attention, Tasso may have collaborated with his friend in providing some at least of the texts for I lieti amanti. His own contribution to the genre, Non si levava, appears to date from 1586-7. Composers in a wider circle continued to set similar dialogues, notably Monteverdi.

The most salient characteristic of the dialoghi di partenza is the opportunity they afford composers to convey reported speech through variations in the texture. At its most obvious, this consists of male-female differentiation through the use of low and high voices respectively (Casulana, 1570; Piffari, 1583; Marenzio, 1584; Bertani, 1585, who assigns the two roles to two spatially separated four-voice choirs; Fiorini, Vecchi, Alberti, L'Occa in I lieti amanti; Massaino, 1587; Cancineo, 1590). In settings of Spinola's prototype poem and of a few others, this registral contrast affects not only the 'a dio' exchanges but also such phrases as 'Pastor afflitto, afflitta pastorella' (Marenzio and others) and 'Amante che piangeva, / afflitta amata ...' (Isnardi). Marenzio's treatment of Spinola's opening exchange is especially subtle. He is the first to dispense with the poem's prima parte and he changes the word order

Table 3 Overview of the partenza

Date	$Date^{1} Text (Author)^{2}$	Settings	Conceits4	4
		No. Sources³	River	Heaven	Tents	Sight	R Pearly	R CESTS	Adulter Parador Parador	Adulter	d
C.3 BC	c.3 BC Heroides, xviii (Ovid)		*		*	*	*	*
1563	'Come viver potrò', dicea Damone, '	1 Wert, a7 in IIIa5 (1563; NV 2976)					*	*		*
1566	Da le belle contrade d'oriente / chiara e lieta s'ergea Ciprigna (sonnet)	1 Rore, Va5 (1566; NV 2418)	*	*	*	*	*	*
1570	'A dio Filli mia bella.' / 'Caro mio Tirsi, a dio, poi che 'l ciel vuole' (A. Spinola)	Lidia mia bella., I 'Caro mio Meri a dio' (= part 2 of Ben verga il pastor mio; Mauro de' Serri, Ia5 (157); NV 1759); Cortellini Ia5, 6 (1583; NV 630) as 'A dio Lidia mia bella.' I 'Caro mio Tirsi a dio' (= part 2 of Ben vengh'il pastor mio); Angelini, IIa5 (1585; NV 78); Marenzio, IIa6 (1584; NV 1653) as 'Filli mia bella, a dio'; Eremita a8 in Ia6 (1586; NV 892) as 'Filli mia bella, a dio'; Eremita a8 in Ia6 (1586; NV 892) as 'Filli mia bella, a dio'; Eremita a8 in Ia6 (1586; NV 892) as 'Filli mia bella, a dio'; Caro mia bella, I' Titiro caro a dio poi che' I ciel vole' (= part 2 of Ben venga il pastor mio); Leoni, Ia5 (1588; NV 1501); Cancineo, a4 in Ia4, 5, 6, 8 (1590; NV 475); Croce, Ia6 (1590; NV 670); Buonavita, Ia6 (1591; NV 440); Bianciardi, Ia5 (1597; NV 361); Ruffolo, a5 in IIIa5, 7 (1612; NV 2496). Text attrib. 'Cap. Alessandro Spinola' in Scelta di rime di diversi eccellenti poeti di nuovo raccolte e date in luce parte seconda, ed. Cristoforo Zabata (Genoa, 1579), p.126	*	*	*		*			*
1579	Partir convienmi ahi lasso, / o mia ninfa gentile (Spinola; canzonetta)	4, Paratico, Canzonette a tre voci libro secondo (1588; NV 2138); Il Verso, las (1590; NV 1330); Zacharia, a4 in Soave e dilettevole canzonette (1590, NV 3005); P. Pace, IVa4(1614; NV 2074). Text attrib. 'Cap. Alessandro Spinola' in Scelta di rime, ed. Zabata (1579), p.142	*			*				*
1583	'A dio', Titiro disse, / 'Piovan gratie e favori al tuo desio'	1 Piffari, $a_5$ in RISM $_{1583^{12}}$	*	*
1583	'A dio, bella Clorinda', / disse Damon cortese	1 Vecchi, a5 in RISM 1583 <sup>11</sup>		*	*					*

Table 3 continued

$Date^1$	Text (Author) <sup>2</sup>		ings	Cor	ıcei	$ts^4$
		No.	Sources <sup>3</sup>	My Riv		L'equen	Tore of	Pallo	O. C.	De No	Renta	CASSES .	Parao	Month of the land
1584	'Dolce Amarilli a dio.' / 'A dio Titiro mio'	1	Virchi, Ia5 (1584; NV 2929)		*	*		*		э	*		-
	'Cara mia Dafne a dio', / disse partendo a l'apparir del sole	4	Milleville, IIa5 (1584; NV 1859); Bertani, Ia6 (1585; NV 347); Vecchi, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup> ); Monte, VIa6 (1591; NV 797)	*		*		*	*	*			*
1585	Tirsi partir volea de la sua Filli, / ella dicea iterando amplessi e baci	1	Bertani, Ia6 (1585; NV 347)			*		*		*		*		*
1586	Tirsi dolente e mesto, / quando parte l'aurora e vien il sole	1	Fiorino, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>	*		*	*	*		* >				*
1586	'A dio, bella Siringa, / bella Siringa, a dio'	2	Alberti, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup> ; Radesca di Foggia, a5 ('Dolorosa partenza d'amanti') in Madrigali libro primo (1615; NV 2309)		*		*	*		*			*	*
1586	Due pallidetti amanti / vid'io press'una fonte	1	Milleville, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>		*				*	,				*
1586	Press'una verde riva / io queste voci udia	1	Tosoni, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>		*	*					*
1586	'Dolce e vaga mia Clori, / a dio.' 'Silvano, a dio'	1	Agostini, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>			*		*		2	* *		*
1586	'A dio, dolce Aminta.' / 'Bella mia Silvia, a dio'	1	L'Occa, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>		*	*				* *	•			*
1586	'A dio', Titiro disse. 'A dio', rispose / la bella Citarea	1	Virchi, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>			*		*	*	*		,
1586	'Dolce Amaranta, a dio.' / 'Corinto, a dio', / dicea partendo allora	1	Isnardi, a5 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>	*		*	*	*	*	:				*
1586	Filli al partir del suo caro pastore / dicea: 'Ben mio, se tu fai col mio core'	1	Luzzaschi, a6 in RISM 1586 <sup>10</sup>				*
	Non si levava ancor l'alba novella, / né spiegavan le piume (Tasso)	1	Monteverdi, IIa 5 (1590; NV 1903); V. Gallo, a 5 in RISM 1598 <sup>8</sup> (with different continuation)	*		*		*	*	* :	+ ×	,	+

$Date^{1}$		Settings
		No.	Sources <sup>3</sup>	and River	A OF	Year	Wand of the last o	Pallon	C. C.	Death	THE CO	Canado	Stores.	Men
1587	'A dio dolce mia vita', / dicea Clori gradita	1	G. Gabrieli, a 10 in Concerti (1587; NV 1046)			*		П			I	Ī		*
1587	'Rimanti in pace', a la dolente e bella / Fillide Tirsi sospirando disse (A. Grillo; sonnet)	4	Monteverdi, IIIa5 (1592; NV 1906) Marenzio, XIa5 (1594; NV 1629) with 'Fillide' replaced by 'Cloride'; Ratti, IIa4 (1596; NV 2319); S. Rossi, Ia5 (1600; NV 2445); Casentini, IVa5 (1607; NV 498) with 'Cloride'. Text first printed in Rime di diversi celebri poeti dell'età nostra, ed. G. B. Licino (Bergamo, 1587), p.133 (attrib. Livio Celiano)					*	*	*				*
1599	'A dio Filli mia bella.' / 'A dio Damon', diss'ella	1	Monte, a7, La Fiammetta (1591; NV 734)			*						*
602	A dio Florida bella, il cor piagato / nel mio partir ti lascio, e porto meco (G. B. Marino; sonnet)	3	Marsolo, a4 in Madrigali boscarecci (1607; NV 1730) Taroni, Ia5 (1612; NV 2710); Monteverdi, VIa5 (1612, NV 1932). Text first printed in G. B. Marino, Rime parte prima (Venice, 1602), p.89		‡	*	*		*			*	*
602	Misero Alceo, del caro albergo fore / gi pur conviemmi, e ch'al partir m'appres		Monteverdi, VIa5 (1614; NV 1932). Text first printe in G. B. Marino, Rime parte prima, p.89	i				*		*			*
639	'A dio Clori mia vita, / A dio Clori mio core'	1	Tarditi, a5 in Madrigali libro III (1639; NV 2707)		‡	*			*	*		*	*
1643	L'incoronazione di Poppea (G. F. Busenello; opera), Act 1 scene 3	1	Monteverdi (Venice, Teatro SS. Giovanni e Paolo)	*		*							*	*	*

Notes to table 3

- 1 Except in the case of Ovid, dates are the year of first appearance of a poem in print, whether in a musical or in a poetic collection.
- 2 All texts are madrigals unless otherwise stated.
- 3 IIa4, IIIa5 etc. indicate Il secondo libro de madrigali a4, Il terzo libro de madrigali a5 etc. In the case of the following prints, I have relied on information in Il nuovo Vogel (NV), i.e. E. Vogel, A. Einstein, F. Lesure and C. Sartori, Bibliografia della musica italiana vocale profana pubblicata dal 1500 al 1700 (Pomezia, 1977): NV 361, 440, 670, 1330, 2074, 2138, 2309, 3005.
- 4 'Heaven' = accession of lovers to the will of heaven. 'Amore' = Amor is present. 'Grief' = expression of grief apart from other listed words (e.g. 'languido', 'martiri', 'afflitto' etc.). 'Paradox' = paradoxical conceit, usually at the conclusion, involving the heart (e.g. the division of the lover's undivided heart, or the separation of each of the lovers from his or her heart) or the juxtaposition of the words 'partire' and 'restare'.
  - $\dagger$  = Arno;  $\ddagger$  = Tebro (Tiber) of the first line from 'A dio Filli mia bella' to 'Filli mia bella, a dio'. This allows him to contrive a symmetrical arrangement of the words in lines 1–2—(a1) 'Filli', (b1) 'Filli mia bella, a dio', (b2) 'Caro mio Tirsi, a dio', (a2) 'a dio' (stated three times)<sup>32</sup>—and to introduce intensified repetition (b1 and b2; a2). Tension is created by the move from F to G minor, with the unresolved cadence in G minor followed by a chord of Bb (see ex.2). Alberto L'Occa's contribution to I lieti amanti (the text of which, as we have seen, closely resembles Spinola's poem) starts in a manner similar to Marenzio's, with repeated statements of 'a dio' petering out into a half cadence and a 3rd-related chord following the pause.

Ex.2 Marenzio, Filli mia bella, a dio, bars 1–16 (after Luca Marenzio: Opera omnia, ed. B. Meier and R. Jackson, Corpus Mensurabilis Musicae, lxxii (American Institute of Musicology, 1976–99), iv, pp.190–94, at p.190)

MUSIC OF THE ITALIAN RENAISSANCE

in the MUSICA BRITANNICA edition

Recently published:

MB74 Italian Madrigals Englished (ed. Chatterley)

Thomas Watson's publication of Italian madrigals, with his own English verses fitted to them.

Publication December 1999:

MB75 Peter Philips: Complete Keyboard Music (ed. Smith)

Features 14 keyboard intabulations by this English expatriate master of the Italian style, printed with their polyphonic models - including works by Caccini, Marenzio and Vecchi - in full score.

Volumes also available:

MB29 Peter Philips: Select Italian Madrigals (ed. Steele)
MB61 Peter Philips: Cantiones Sacrae Octonis Vocibus of 1613 (ed. Steele)

For further information, and a catalogue containing full details of the series, including material available for performers, please contact:

Stainer & Bell Ltd

PO Box 110, Victoria House, 23 Gruneisen Road, London N3 1DZ Telephone: 020 8343 3303 Fax: 020 8343 3024

relephone: 020 8343 3303 Fax: 020 8343 3024 e-mail: post@stainer.co.uk http://www.stainer.co.uk

THE DELIN HARPSICHORD

Our 'Delin' harpsichord is closely modelled on four surviving harpsichords made by Albertus Delin between 1751 and 1768 and has been designed by John Barnes of Edinburgh, formerly Curator of the Russell Collection of Harpsichords, University of Edinburgh.

The kit comes with the casework preassembled. The IId, baseboard and soundboard are supplied planked and sanded to thickness and we use wooden Jacks for complete authenticity. Single manual 220cm x 91cm x 25cm. Double GG-f', 59-notes. Transposing up and down.

Send £5.00 (refundable on first order) for our latest catalogue.

• now open • Phone for details

The Early Music Shop, Dept EM, 38 Manningham Lane, Bradford, West Yorkshire, England, BDI 3EA. Web site: http://www.e-m-s.com/Email: sales@earlyms.demon.co.uk

Tel: +44 (0) 1274 393753 Fax: +44 (0) 1274 393516

19TH CENTURY MUSIC

19th-Century Music provides a lively platform for both innovative and traditional scholarship concerning music composed between 1789 and 1914. The journal embraces a broad spectrum of issues in musicology such as aesthetics, hermeneutics, criticism, theory and analysis, performance practice, gender and sexuality, reception history, and archival questions. Insightful book reviews and review articles are also regular features of the journal.

Triannual subscription rates: Individuals: $35, Institutions: $95, Student/Retired: $21 (Outside N. America, please add $20 airmall postage.)

To order 19th-Century Music:

University of California Press Journals
 2000 Center Street, Ste. 303

Berkeley, CA 94704-1223

510/642-9917

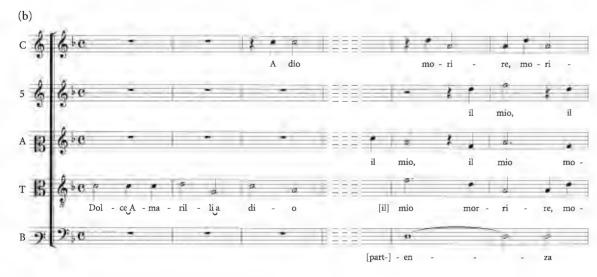

E-mail - jorders@ucpress.ucop.edu

Short-breathed motives tossed between one group and another, primarily on the words 'a dio' but also spilling over to words like 'Te 'n vai, haime' (Rore), 'A dio ... il mio morire' (Virchi) and 'Ben mio ... ohime' (Luzzaschi) convey the feverish exchanges of the parting lovers and can lead to textual fragmentation (see ex.3). A similar technique involving close echoes between two groups and oscillation between two 5th-related chords can convey sighing or distraught breathlessness, and is probably intended to suggest the sexual act. This division of the ensemble into two half-choirs is a peculiarly Roman technique that Marenzio may have developed from Macque,<sup>33</sup> and which he uses already in Ridean gia per piagg'herbette e fiori, one of the compositions in the manuscript compiled in 1580 to honour Laura Peperara (see ex.4). His use of the technique in Deggio dunque partire,

Ex.3 (a) Cipriano de Rore, Da le belle contrade d'oriente, bars 30–35 (after Cipriano de Rore: Opera omnia, ed. B. Meier, Corpus Mensurabilis Musicae, xiv (American Institute of Musicology, 1959–77), v, pp.96–9, at p.97); (b) Paolo Virchi, Dolce Amarilli a dio (Il primo libro de madrigali a5, 1584), opening and closing lines; (c) Luzzasco Luzzaschi, Filli al partir del suo caro pastore, bars 9–11 (after I lieti amanti, ed. Giuliani, pp.118–22, at p.119)

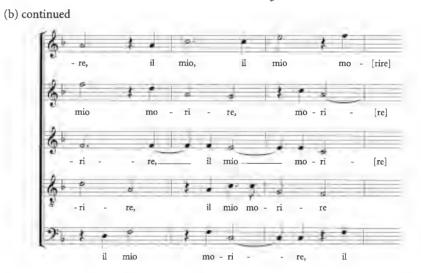

the three-movement partenza that opens Il secondo libro de madrigali a5 (1581), dedicated to Lucrezia d'Este,<sup>34</sup> prompted Vecchi to quote Marenzio's motif directly.<sup>35</sup> Another Marenzian hallmark, found for example in Spuntavan già per far il mondo adorno,<sup>36</sup> is a simple stepwise motif, closely imitated, suggesting playfulness. A closely related motif is used at the conclusion of his Filli mia bella, a dio, where a theme in descending minims is combined with an zigzagging version of itself. This theme was borrowed by Massaino (1587) and Ruffolo (1612) in their settings of the same text (see ex.5).

Marenzio's playful conclusion suggests that his reading of the text was not as serious as that of other composers. Spinola's emblematic text, in which emotions are enumerated rather than described, does not lend itself to expressive intensity. However, in I lieti amanti, pallor, sighing and tears tinge both texts and music with greater emotionalism. (This may have been Tasso's contribution, as the same trait is seen in his Non si levava.) Not surprisingly, the composers of I lieti amanti use chromaticism with telling effect—not especially the linear chromaticism of Marenzio but an indirect form involving false relations and the substitution of minor for major chords, or vice versa.<sup>37</sup> This was part of an intensifying process which can be traced in later partenze, whether of the monologue or of the dialogue kind, including Monteverdi's setting of Non si levava (whose 'a dio' exchanges resemble Rore's in their use of chromaticism),38 the settings of Grillo's sonnet 'Rimanti in pace', a la dolente e bella by Monteverdi (1592) and Marenzio (1594), and a series

Ex.3 continued

Ex.4 (a) Marenzio, Ridean gia per le piagg'herbette e fiori (Il terzo libro de madrigali a5, 1582; after Luca Marenzio: Sämtliche Werke, ed. A. Einstein, Publikationen älterer Musik, iv (Leipzig, 1929-31; R/Hildesheim-Wiesbaden, 1967), i, pp.118-21, at p.121); (b) Bartolomeo Piffari, 'A dio', Titiro disse (RISM 158312); (c) Lelio Bertani, Cara mia Dafne, a dio (Il primo libro de madrigali a6, 1585); (d) Orazio Vecchi, Cara mia Dafne, a dio, bars 19-27 (after I lieti amanti, ed. Giuliani, pp.53-5, at p.55) of other extremely intense partenze in Marenzio's Il sesto libro de madrigali a5 (1594) and Nono libro de madrigali a5 (1599).39

It fell to Monteverdi to transfer the partenza genre from madrigal to opera. Already in his setting of Marino's sonnet A dio Florida bella, il cor piagato (in his sixth book of 1614) he assigns the roles of the male and female speakers to soloists, while the narrative parts are sung by all the voices of the ensemble, a procedure he also uses elsewhere. He uses strophic variation to unite the first quatrain (spoken by Florinda) with the second (Floro). Ideologically, Marino's nymph and shepherd belong with the creations of Tasso and Spinola, in an idealized landscape where pure emotions are conveyed in harmonious verse (and music). However, in

Ex.4 continued

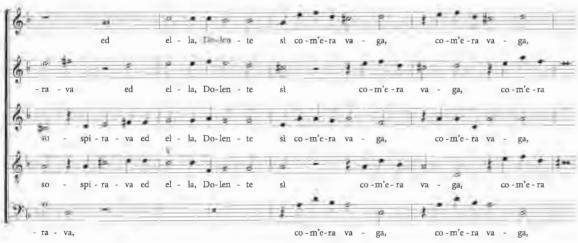

Act I scene 3 of L'incoronazione di Poppea, the bedroom replaces the riverbank; pastoral idyll gives way to the squalid hurly-burly of domestic and imperial politics; and adultery is back with a vengeance, replacing vague allusions to heaven and fate. Monteverdi and Busenello knew the alba tradition and were able to modulate its conventions to comic effect: for instance, the lovers' exchanges lack the balance found in earlier dawn scenes: where Poppea is loquacious, Nerone is brusque; later on it is Nerone who soars with flights of rhetoric, while Poppea insistently tries to bring him down to earth by asking him when he will be back. Only at the end, with the patently exaggerated exchange of 'a dio', is mutual harmony restored.

The dialoghi di partenza brought a new expressive dimension to the late Cinquecento madrigal, in which shifts of texture and rapid alternations between half-choirs could be used to convey intense emotional and erotic exchanges at the dramatic moment when lovers whose hearts are united are forced to part physically. At the heart of the phenomenon is the development, within a genre whose raison d'être was the imitation of conceits, Ex.5 (a) Marenzio, Filli mia bella, a dio, bars 63–5 (source as in ex.2, at.p.94); Tiburtio Massaino, A dio, Lidia mia bella (Il terzo libro de madrigali a5, 1587), last line; Vincenzo Ruffolo, A dio, Filli mia bella (Il terzo libro de madrigali a5, 7, 1612), canto, last line.

of a system for representing the dialogue and interchanges between characters. One might surmise that the apportioning of dialogues to Ferrarese composers in I lieti amanti may reflect the availability of female singers to represent the female character and their relative scarcity elsewhere, a case, perhaps, of Ferrarese one-upmanship.40 However, we should not rule out the possibility of an all-male ensemble, especially given that Gianluca in his dedication mentions only 'gentiluomini'. Just to complicate matters further, there is evidence that one of the scorn pieces, Porta's Donna ben v'ingannate, whose quinto and canto both use the C1 clef, was intended for two sopranos, though whether 'soprano' specifically denotes women is another matter.41 But whatever the exact composition of the ensemble, it is striking that the madrigals of sdegno, in contrast to the partenze, are all written in the person of the man. The poets even ram this point home by using the word 'donna' in eight out of ten cases (all except nos.10 and 20).

The sense of drama and a 'representative' immediacy of expression in the dialoghi di partenza were no doubt stimulated by the narrative nature of the texts; however, it would probably be wrong to interprete these characteristics as precursors of opera. Rather, the short motivic exchanges representing kisses, sighs, sobbing and so forth encouraged textual fragmentation of the kind found in more exaggerated form in the later, often elegiac madrigals of Luzzaschi, Fontanelli and Gesualdo, and also in Marenzio's Nono libro. The dialogo di partenza is thus closely intertwined with the lament—especially as it relates to the topos of the abandoned woman<sup>42</sup>—and indeed overlaps with it: both genres, nourished by a rich repertory of literary sources and by the musical example of Rore, played an important role in shaping the late Cinquecento madrigal at a critical point in its development.

- 1 I lieti amanti: madrigali di venti musicisti ferraresi e non, ed. M. Giuliani (Florence, 1990), from which I draw my textual and musical examples (with minor differences of styling). For additional information, see M. Giuliani, 'I lieti amanti, un'antologia ferrarese di madrigali', Giornale filologico ferrarese, vi (1983), pp.73–8, 107–13.
- 2 See M. Morell, 'New evidence for the biographies of Andrea and Giovanni Gabrieli', Early music history, iii (1983), pp.101–22, at p.110.
- 3 I have not included in table 1 the manuscript collection of madrigals in praise of Laura Peverara (Verona. Società Accademia Filarmonica, Ms. 220) probably compiled in late 1580 under the auspices of the Accademia Filarmonica in Verona, For this and the first two anthologies in table 1, see A. Newcomb, 'The three anthologies for Laura Peperara, 1580-1583', Rivista italiana di musicologia, x (1975), pp.329-45. In the case of Il lauro verde, on the reverse side of the title-page stands Tasso's sonnet Laura, del vostro lauro in queste carte, the last line of which reads 'Pur io li scelsi, e però miei li chiamo' ('I chose them, and so I call - them mine'); for further details, see I lieti amanti, ed. Giuliani, p.18 n.42. Some of the poems in Il lauro verde are by Tasso; see Torquato Tasso: Rime, ed. A. Solerti (Bologna, 1898), ii, pp.284–5. For a discussion of La gloria musicale, see J. Chater, 'Reflections of musical glory: Bonifazio Bevilacqua as poet and patron', Musicologia humana: studies in honor of Warren and Ursula Kirkendale, ed. S. Gmeinwieser et al. (Florence, 1994), pp.233–50.
- 4 In an undated letter to Maurizio Cataneo in Rome (Le lettere di Torquato Tasso, ed C. Guasti (Florence, 1882–5), ii, pp.571–3 (no.545)), Tasso refers to 'signor Ippolito Gianluca, al quale non si può negare alcuna cosa, perchè egli solo mi cava alcuna volta di prigione' ('Signor Ippolito Gianluca, to whom one can deny nothing, for he alone sometimes takes me outside prison').
- 5 See Tasso's sonnet Gianluca, ben poss'io di vaghi fiori in Tasso: Rime, ed. Solerti, ii, p.432 (no.390); Newcomb, "The three anthologies', pp.334–5. The sonnet that Tasso presented to Laura Peverara along with Il lauro verde, In queste dolci ed amorose rime (Rime, ed. Solerti, ii, p.286 (no.193)) carries the - following rubric in the Gioie di rime e prose del Sig. Torquato Tasso ... quinta e sesta parte (Venice: Giulio Vasalini, 1587): 'Dedica alla signora Laura Peperara un libro di madrigali, ne' quali si celebra il lauro, raccolto dal signor Ippolito Gianluca' ('[Tasso] dedicates to Signora Laura Peverara a book of madrigals in which the laurel is celebrated, collected by Signor Ippolito Gianluca').

- 6 A similar double structure was used in Le rise a vicenda (RISM 1598<sup>8</sup>), whose alternation between two poems set alternately by Sicilian and Roman composers is probably derived from I lieti amanti: see I lieti amanti, ed. Giuliani, pp.13–14.
- 7 For the motif of the partenza in Cinquecento poetry see Giovan Battista Marino: Rime boscherecce, ed. J. Hauser-Jakubowicz (Ferrara, 1991), p.69 nn.146-7; for sdegno, see Giovan Battista Marino: Rime amorose, ed. O. Besmi and A. Martini (Ferrara, 1987), p.186. For a comparison of the literary, iconographical and musical sources of the partenza, see also S. La Via, Il lamento di Venere abbandonata: Tiziano e Cipriano de Rore, Musicalia, vi (Lucca, 1994).

- 8 Settings of 'Ardo si' and its related texts, ed. G. C. Schuetze, Recent Researches in the Music of the Renaissance, lxxviii–lxxix (Madison, WI, 1990).
- 9 My summary is taken from I lieti amanti, ed. Giuliani, pp.21–2.
- 10 The dialogue was written in 1585 and first published in the Discorso in lode del matrimonio et un dialogo d'amore del Sig. Torquato Tasso (Milan: Pietro Tini, 1586) and in the Gioie di rime e prose ... quinta e sesta parte (1587). It is reprinted in Torquato Tasso: Prose, ed. E. Mazzali (Milan and Naples, 1959), pp.201–15.

11 'Non si levava ancor l'alba novella, /

né spiegavan le piume / gli augelli al nuovo lume, / ma fiammegiava l'amorosa stella, / quando i due vaghi e leggiadretti amanti, / ch'una felice notte aggiunse insieme / come a canto si volge i vari giri, / divise il nuovo raggio; e i dolci pianti / ne l'accoglienze estreme / mescolavan co' baci e co' sospiri. / Mille ardenti pensier, mille desiri, / mille voglie non paghe / in quelle luci vaghe / scopría quest'alma innamorata e quella. / E dicea l'una sospirando allora—/ Anima, addio, con languide parole; / e l'altra—Vita, addio-le rispondea,-/ addio, rimanti;-e non partiansi ancora / innanzi al nuovo sole. / E 'nnanzi a l'alba che nel ciel sorgea / e questa e quella impallidir vedea / le bellissime rose / ne le labbre amorose, / e gli occhi scintillar come facella. / E come l'alma che si parta e svella / fu la partenza loro: / Addio, ché parto e moro! / Dolce languir, dolce partita e fella!' Quoted from Tasso: Le rime, ed. Solerti, ii, p.414 (no.379). It is included in the autograph Modena, Biblioteca Estense, Ms. II.F.16, which according to Solerti (op. cit., i, p.26) was compiled between 1581 and 1586 (when Tasso was confined in Sant'Anna), with a few poems added in 1587, after his release. It was first published in the Gioie di rime e prose ... quinta e sesta parte (Venice: Giulio Vasalini, 1587; the dedication is dated 24 March). Since it is absent from the Rime et prose ... parte quarta (Venice: Giulio Vasalini, 1586; dedication dated 1 April), it seems likely that it was written in 1586 or early

- 12 La Via, Il lamento di Venere abbandonata, esp. pp.59-70.
- 13 The incorrect identification is A dio, bella Siringa (I lieti amanti, no.5, set by Innocenzo Alberti), which Giuliani (I lieti amanti, p.25) claims was set as by Vecchi as A dio, bella Clorinda (RISM 1583<sup>11</sup>). In fact the latter continues: '... disse Damon cortese / ed ella "a dio" gli rese / et fu il contento tale / che l'alme d'ambi dui / restaron prese ...'.
- 14 Luca Marenzio: Opera omnia, ed. B. Meier and R. Jackson, Corpus Mensurabilis Musicae, lxxii (American Institute of Musicology, 1976–99), iv, pp.190–94.
- 15 S. J. Ledbetter, Luca Marenzio: new biographical findings (PhD diss., New York U., 1971), pp.43–58; M. Bizzarini, Marenzio: la carriera di un musicista tra Rinascimento e Controriforma (Rodengo Saiano, 1998), pp.36–49. Marenzio's prominent role in the two anthologies may have been due to the influence of Cardinal Luigi.
- 16 Ledbetter, Marenzio, p.122, cites Milleville's letter to Girolamo Galeazzi in Florence (4 May 1589) enclosing a letter to Marenzio (Modena, Archivio di Stato, Archivio per materie: musica e musicisti, busta 1 (Milleville)). Marenzio had known Eremita as a fellow employee of Cardinal Luigi d'Este in Rome: see Marco Bizzarini's article elsewhere in this issue. Vecchi probably had some private dealings with Marenzio, since he composed an arrangement of Marenzio's unpublished comic madrigal O messir ... O patrù ... in his Selva di varia ricreazione (1590): see W. Kirkendale, 'Franceschina, Girometta, and their companions in a madrigal "a diversi linguaggi" by Luca Marenzio and Orazio Vecchi', Acta musicologica, xlix (1972), pp.181-235. Bertani and Virchi were both from Brescia, the nearest large town to Marenzio's birthplace, Coccaglia, and were more or less the same age as him. According to the local historian Ottaviano Rossi, Marenzio and Bertani were both pupils of Giovanni Contino, the organist at Brescia cathedral, although the possibility that Marenzio was a boy chorister at the cathedral is conjecture: see Bizzarini, Marenzio, pp.70 (n.12), 73. Virchi

- entered the service of Alfonso II some time between 1579 and 1581, remaining there till the dissolution of the Ferrarese court in 1598. Bertani was never formally employed at Ferrara, but his Primo libro de madrigali a6 (1585) was dedicated to the Duke, and, as his letter of dedication makes clear, he had enjoyed access to the musica secreta. His privileged position vis-à-vis the Ferrarese court may explain why he was accorded the honour of being paired with Luzzaschi in the two sixvoice madrigals (nos.19, 20) concluding I lieti amanti.
- 17 The importance of Filli mia bella, a dio was first observed in Giuliani, 'I lieti amanti', p.79, though Marenzio's setting is not mentioned.
- 18 Casulana was born in Casole d'Elsa, near Siena. The dedication of her Il primo libro de madrigali a4 (Venice, 1568) to Isabella de' Medici suggests at least a desire for contact with this famous music-lover, and she also had contacts with Verona and Milan; see I madrigali di Maddalena Casulana, ed. B. Pescerelli (Florence, 1979), pp.5ff. Given the Tuscan origins of the first two composers to set this poem, the reference to the river Arno in line 3 can hardly be a coincidence.
- 19 For a transcription of the poetic text see I madrigali di Maddalena Casulana, ed. Pescerelli, pp.22–3.
- 20 Scelta di rime di diversi eccellenti poeti di nuovo raccolte e date in luce parte seconda, ed. Cristoforo Zabata (Genoa, 1579), p.126. Spinola is also the author of a more extended treatment of the same theme, the four-strophe canzonetta Partir convienni ahi lasso, in which the shepherd and the nymph speak in alternate strophes (Scelta di rime, ed. Zabata, p.142). This poem was set to music four times, its musical fortune following in the wake of A dio, Filli mia bella.
- 21 On Alessandro Spinola the soldier under Charles V, see Aubert Le Mire, Gentis Spinulae illlustrium elogia (Cologne, 1611), pp.26–7. Both Agostino della Cella, Famigli [sic] di Genova antiche e moderne, estinte e viventi (Genoa, Biblioteca Universitaria, Ms. C.IX.19–21, f.1947) and Michele Giustiniani, Gli scrittori liguri (Rome, 1667), p.45, state that he was both a man of

JPH PUBLICATIONS Facsimile Editions

Bridge View Garrigill Alston Cumbria CA9 3DU UK. phone +44(0)1434 381583 fax +44(0)1434 382877 email:

Ediacksph@btinternet.com www.btinternet.com/~edjacksph/ homepage.htm

SEN® NICOLA MATTEIS FIRST AND SECOND BOOK'S OF AIRE'S IN 3 PARTS FOR VIOLINS AND BC

HARMONIA ANGLICANA MUSIC OF THE ENGLISH STAGE IN 4 PARTS FOR STRINGS & BC

APOLLO'S BANQUET

CONTAINING NEW AND EASIE INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE TREBLE VIOLIN VARIETY OF THE BEST AND CHOICEST AYRES, TUNES, JIGGS, MINUETS, SARABRANDS, CHACONES AND CYBELLS, THAT HAVE BEEN PERFORM'D AT BOTH THEATRES AND

OTHER PUBLICK PLACES TO WHICH ARE ADDED THE NEWEST FRENCH DANCES, NOW IN USE AT COURT SEVERAL IN THE COMPASS OF THE

> Scholarly Prefaces Peter Holman

JUST A SAMPLE OF THE 22 NEW ITEMS SOON TO BE AVAILABLE AND 20 ITEMS ALREADY ON SALE

- send for our leaflet
- ♦ visit our web site
- credit card facilities
- reliable world-wide service
- ask about our subscriber's list!

- letters and a soldier. Raffaele Soprani, Li scrittori della Liguria (Genoa, 1667; R/Bologna, n.d.), p.13, equates the 'Capitano' who fought under Charles V with the poet of the Zabata anthologies (see below). I have been unable to identify the genealogy of this older Alessandro. The younger one was the son of Girolamo the son of Gioachino: see the family tree dated 1800 in Genoa, Archivio di Stato, Ms. 491, f.74v, and N. Battilana, Genealogie delle famiglie nobili di Genova (n.p., n.d.), s.v. 'Spinola', p.139. I have found no evidence that the younger Alessandro was a 'capitano'.
- 22 The poems of 'Cap. Alessandro Spinola' (maschere, capitoli, sonnets) can be found in the following anthologies compiled by Zabata: Nuova scelta di varie cose piacevoli di molti nobili et elevati ingegni (Genoa: Antonio Bellone, 1570), pp.43-68; Nuova scelta di rime di diversi begli ingegni frà le quali ne sono molte del Tansillo (Genoa: Antonio Bellone, 1573), pp.146-50; Scelta di rime di diversi eccellenti poeti di nuovo raccolte e date in luce parte seconda (Genoa: Crisoforo Zabata, 1579), pp.124-49; and Della scelta di rime di diversi eccellenti auttori parte prima (Genoa: Crisoforo Zabata, 1582), pp.252-8. Also, two sonnets on the death of Charles V were published in Il secondo volume delle rime scelte da diversi eccellenti autori (Venice: Gabriel Giolito de' Ferrari, 1565), pp.74-5.
- 23 In Camillo Cortellini madrigalista bolognese, ed. R. Dalmonte (Florence, 1980), p.38, Rossana Delmonte assumes that the Alessandro Spinola in question is the one connected with Tasso, and points out that Tasso wrote a letter to Alessandro Spinola thanking him for a sonnet he had sent him; see Le lettere di Torquato Tasso, ed. Guasti, ii, pp.488-9 (no.464). Guasti's placing of the letter implies that it was written in about January 1586.
- 24 For details, see E. Durante and A. Martellotti, Don Angelo Grillo O.S.B. alias Livio Celiano, poeta per musica del secolo decimosesto (Florence, 1989). Dalmonte (Camillo Cortellini, p.30 n.131) mistakenly writes that the Livia who married Spinola was Grillo's sister. However, Grillo had no sister called Livia, and 'Spinola' was the - maiden name as well as the married name of the poet Livia. Her paternal father and grandfather were called Alessandro and Lorenzo respectively; see Genealogie delle famiglie nobili di Genova, s.v. 'Spinola', p.37.

- 25 The fact that Tosone reset 22 of the 31 texts of Il lauro verde in his Primo libro de madrigali a4 (1590) also suggests a close relationship with Ferrarese musical circles.
- 26 My thanks to Leofranc Holford-Strevens for suggesting this line of enquiry.
- 27 For comments on the absence of albe in the Sicilian school and the dolce stil novo, see R. Glynn Faithfull, 'Italian', in A. T. Hatto, Eos: an enquiry into the theme of lovers' meetings and partings at dawn in poetry (The Hague, 1965), pp.390-418. For the Ovid connection, see J. Saville, The medieval erotic 'alba': structure as meaning (New York and London, 1972), pp.122ff.
- 28 Heroides, xviii.125-6: 'Ei mihi! cur animis iuncti secernimur undis, / unaque mens, tellus non habet una duos?' ('Ah me! why are we joined in soul and parted by the wave; two beings in one mind, but not of one land?'); see Ovid, Heroides and Amores, trans, G. Showerman, Loeb Classical Library (London, 7/1958), p.253.
- 29 Compare Petrarch, Canzoniere, no.33 (Gia fiammegiava l'amorosa stella ...) with Non si levava, l.4 (given above) and the Epistoli d'Ovidio di Remigio [Nannini] fiorentino divise in due libri (Venice, 1571), p.229: 'Gia fiammegiava l'amorosa stella / che viene inanzi à l'alba ...'
- 30 Glynn Faithfull, 'Italian', pp.122ff., mentions the presence of the dawn parting in folk poetry, in Boccaccio's Filostrato and in Luigi Groto's play La Hadriana (1578; a possible source for Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet).
- 31 According to G. Gaspari, Catalogo della Biblioteca del Liceo Musicale di Bologna (Bologna, 1890-93), iii, pp.249-50, 'Bartolomeo fu [= the son of Marcantonio Piffari di Bologna' was elected 'maestro di cappella, (o veramente cantore, musico e precettore dei canonici, mansionari e cherici nel canto fermo e figurato)' of the cathedral at Carpi (near Modena) in 1575, but he does not cite his source. R. Eitner, Biographisch-Bibliographisches Quellen-Lexicon (Graz, 2/1959-60), vii, p.446, describes Bartolomeo Piffaro as Bolognese but states that it was Marcantonio who was appointed to the post in Carpi, a mistake repeated in W. Boetticher, 'Marc'Antonio Pifaro', Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart (Kassel, 1949-73), x, col.1270, and in I. I. Pierce, 'Marc' Antonio Pifaro', New Grove, xiv, p.744.

- 32 Although according to the rules of prosody the word 'dio' in 1,2 has one syllable, Marenzio sets it in the same way as in 1.1, with two, thus allowing the leaning effect on 'a dio' with the suspension in bars 9-10.
- 33 See J. Chater, Luca Marenzio and the Italian madrigal, 1577-1593 (Ann Arbor, MI, 1980), i, p.14. The theorist Artusi called the device 'gioco'.
- 34 It has been suggested that Marenzio's choice of this text alludes to his leave-taking from Ferrara (Ledbetter, Marenzio, p.56) or from Lucrezia d'Este (Bizzarini, Marenzio, p.43 n.27). Perhaps this madrigal had a special meaning for Ferrarese composers.

- 35 Compare ex.4d, 'com'era vaga', with Marenzio's Deggio dunque partire in Luca Marenzio: Sämtliche Werke: Madrigale für fünf Stimmen, ed. A. Einstein, Publikationen älterer Musik, iv/1, vi (Leipzig, 1929-31), iv/1, p.45, at 's'io resto vivo'.
- 36 Marenzio: Sämtliche Werke, ed. Einstein, iv/1, pp.6-7, at 'tra lor scherzando' ('frolicking among each other'). Compare Virchi's Dolce Amarilli a dio (1584) at the words 'il lasciarti, pastorella'.
- 37 For example, no.1 (Fiorim), bars 3 ('mesto', 'sad'-see ex.1), 22 ('piange', 'weeps'), 36 ('core', 'heart'); no.11 (Agostini), bars 2-4 (false relations), 22-3 ('mi farà morire', 'will cause me to die'), 39-40 ('dolente e bella', 'grieving and beautiful'); no.15 (Virchi), bars 16-17 ('impallidiva insieme', 'together grew pale').
- 38 Compare ex.3a with Monteverdi's setting in Claudio Monteverdi: Madrigali a 5 voci libro secondo, ed. A. M. Monterosso Vacchelli, Instituta et Monumenta, series I, v/3 (Cremona, 1979), p.97. See also La Via, Il lamento di Venere abbandonata.

- 39 S'io parto, i' moro, e pur partir conviene (Ridolfo Arlotti), Clori nel mio partire (?Bonifacio Bevilacqua), Stillò l'anima in pianto (Antonio Ongaro), Ah dolente partita (Guarini) 'Rimanti in pace', a la dolente e bella (Angelo Grillo alias Livio Celiano), Parto o non parto and Credete'l voi ch'io viva-all in Marenzio: Sämtliche Werke, ed. Einstein, vi.
- 40 My thanks to Tim Carter for suggesting this.
- 41 Giuliani (I lieti amanti, pp.29-30) points out that Porta's piece carries the rubric 'con dui soprani' in his Quarto libro de madrigali as (1586). It is one of two settings of the same text; in the other (transcribed in I lieti amanti, ed. Giuliani, pp.129-32), the quinto occupies a range between the alto and the tenor.
- 42 On the 'abandoned woman' theme, see the articles by Stras, Holford-Strevens, Carter, MacNeil, Brooks and Cusick in the 'Laments' issue of Early music, xxvii/3 (Aug 1999), pp.358-449.

